Robin Aviators Pass 316 Hours in Flight

TEXAN THREAT ACTS AS SPUR TO HARDY PAIR

Houston Record Seekers Pass
214 Hour Mark After Fighting Storm.

LAMBERT FIELD, ST. LOUIS, July 26.—The spur of a rival's achievement today was thought to be partly responsible for the amazing feat of the St. Louis Robin which at 11:17 this morning had been in constant companionship with the clouds for 316 hours and had begun its 14th day in the air.

Just as the threat of Lou Gehrig's challenge pushed Babe Ruth on to a new world record in the world of sports, the reminder that the "Billion Dollar City" the Houston endurance plane was still aloft, today was thought to be instilling new determination in the doughty Forrest O'Brine and Dale Jackson, the Robin crew.

DETERMINED TO STAY
Jackson has messaged their determination "not to come down while the Houston plane is in the air." Yesterday the friendly rivalry culminated in an exchange of notes, Glenn Loomis and Joe Glass of the "Billion Dollar City" writing "good luck but use discretion, we have only one mag life" and the local pilots answering "stay with her boys that one mag may do it."

With that 300 hour goal, a mark which until the Robin's amazing performance had been thought to be a fairy tale dream, now attained and passed, five hundred hours is the new goal.

Jackson and O'Brine have both expressed their confidence that they will attain this peak. Their latest message read "feeling fine getting fat. We are good for more hours." This would hardly belie their determination.

EXANS FIGHT STORM
HUSTON, TEX., July 26.—(AP)—Ever-mindful of their rivals in the air and continuing desperately to eventually reach the St. Louis Robin's total, the Houston fliers piloting the "Billion Dollar City" braved a tempest last night and completed 24 continuous hours of flying at 11:45 this morning.

The plane, piloted by Jos Glass and G. L. Loomis, is functioning perfectly, and last night's battle with stormy weather proved the efficiency of the Texas plane, which never gave indication of faltering.

A request was made this morning for permission to fly over other airports during the local threatening weather. Officials here of the National Aeronautical Association took the matter up with headquarters in Washington.

MRS. JUNK RITES ARE HELD FRIDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Armida Junk, 56, mother of Mrs. R. H. Rodger, of Circleville, who died Thursday at her home on the 1000 E. Fayette-co., were held Friday afternoon at the Fairview church. Rev. Gearhart, of Dayton, conducted the services. Burial was in Washington cemetery.

She is survived by her husband, Thomas Junk; two daughters, Mrs. Rodger, of Circleville, and Elizabeth, at home; two sons, Almer and Kenneth, both at home; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Vincent, of Washington C. H. and four sisters, Mrs. John Rowe, Mrs. J. H. Kelley and Mrs. Maurice Williams, Washington C. H. and Mrs. Will Kriville, of Frankfort.

MISS HERRMANN PAINFULLY INJURED

Carolyn, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl J. Herrmann of N. Court-st met with what might have been a serious accident Friday morning and was painfully injured. While playing with other children's children and riding on a wheel toy she fell into an open cellar at the George Mast residence and cut a deep gash in her forehead, over her right eye. She was attended by Dr. D. V. Court-right.

New Air Kings

These two St. Louis fliers have not only passed the world's endurance flight record, but are continuing to pile up additional hours. Forrest O'Brine is shown above, and Dale "Red" Jackson, below.

CHURCH FUNDS LENT, CHARGE

Bishop Cannon Used Money
To Oppose Al Smith, Minister Says.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., leader of the anti-Smith Democrats of the south, carried his political activity against Smith to the point in the last campaign that he loaned funds belonging to the Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service, of which he is chairman, to political organizations fighting the New York governor, according to a letter written by Dr. Rembert C. Smith, a Georgia pastor, to the Lynchburg, Va., News, and reproduced in the Washington Times.

The Rev. Smith protested against Bishop Cannon's financial aid to the anti-Smith party in Virginia, declaring that "the income of this board is secured as a result of an assessment levied on the church by the general conference, and no action by the general conference warrants the use of it for the help of any political party or candidate, and to lend it or use it for such purposes is in violation of the laws of the church."

"If every member of the church had desired the success of the Republican party and the election of Hoover, it still would have been improper to use this fund for the accomplishment of such purpose," said Rev. Smith's letter. "But inasmuch as a large number of the members of the church did not desire the success of the Republican party or the election of Mr. Hoover, the lending of their money for these purposes was a violation of their inherent and inalienable rights."

Two loans were made, the Times says, of $5,000 each.

LEG IS INJURED

Miss Elizabeth Medley, of E. Main-st suffered a possible fractured leg at Sippo Park Thursday evening. The bench fell on Miss Medley's leg giving a painful injury with a possibility of its being fractured.

FRENCH STARS VICTORS OVER TILDEN, LOTT

Youthful American Fights
Savagely—Old Master Is Helpless On Court.

ROLAND GARROS STADIUM, Paris, July 26.—American hope for a return of the Davis cup this year virtually died on the shields of William T. Tilden and George M. Lott, Jr., this afternoon, the Yankee pair being soundly beaten by the French in the first two singles matches of the challenge round. Tilden, playing without a semblance of the fire the old champion once knew, succumbed docilely to his nemesis, Henry Cochet, by 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Lott made his challenge round debut a more notable one by fighting Jean Borotra to the death before the Basque's greater steadiness and surety gained the decision by 6-1, 3-6, 6-4 and 7-5.

THREE MORE MATCHES
With only three matches remaining, France thus gained what amounted virtually to a chattel mortgage on the cup for another year. It now needs only one more victory, either in the doubles match tomorrow, or in the final two singles on Sunday, to retain the trophy it has held since 1927.

It had been expected that the absence of Rene LaCoste would place the French in jeopardy but there was no evidence to support this notion today, although Lott for a time revived American hopes by the manner in which he fought Borotra back on his heels. The young Yankee finally took a lead of 5 to 3 in games in the fourth set only to be swept aside by the power and brilliance of the Frenchman's final rush to victory.

TILDEN HELPLESS
Lott thus died with his boots on. With Tilden's defeat, the drama was utterly missing. Just an old man, he was helpless against Cochet and his futile gestures served only to delay the inevitable. It was Cochet's third victory over Tilden in Davis cup play, and by long odds, the easiest. In the first set, not a game was carried to deuce. In the second, Tilden was beaten in 12 minutes. In the third, he merely was playing out the string, knowing full well that he could do nothing to stop the brilliant Frenchman who has beaten him more times than any man living. It is doubtful whether Cochet's straight-set victory over Tilden at Wimbledon last month was gained with less effort than Henri expended today.

RACE WAR ON IN GREENE-CO

Twenty-seven Held on Gambling Charges Mark Dog Track Opening.

XENIA, O., July 26.—Greene-co's war on "betting" at the $100,000 Fairfield dog racing track, near here, has begun in earnest. Twenty-seven cashiers at the "contribution" and "refund" windows of the track were arrested last night.

All were released under bond of $50, each, and County Prosecutor J. Earl Marshall declared he will file charges of "unlawful gaming" against the men.

Approximately $14,000 in cash was also seized at the windows where the "investment" and cash prize system of "betting" was being allowed. It is being held by authorities pending a decision in the case.

The arrests last night were made quietly just as the last race was being run.

"Investors" who were entitled to a "cash prize" due to picking a winner in the last race, were told to return to the track tonight for their money, indicating that the arrests will not stop the operation of the track.

More than 7,000 people were present at the dog races last night, but only a few knew of the arrests.

OUT OF HOSPITAL

Miss Lucile Cris, who underwent an operation recently at Mt. Carmel hospital in Columbus, was brought to her home on N. Court-st Tuesday in the Mader and Ebert invalid car.

Bankers Brought to Bar of Justice

Here are the famous four Clarke partners photographed as they faced the court in General Sessions, New York. Clarke pleaded guilty to the State's charges, dramatically accepting the blame for the crash and promised to turn over all his property.

Effects of Love Potion Administered By Slain Co-ed Are Added to Complicated Pleas of "Self Defense" and "Emotional Insanity" in Snook's Fight For Life

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
COLUMBUS, O., July 26.—Dr.

James H. Snook's defense in the slaying of Miss Theora Hix, beautiful young university co-ed, is gradually becoming more complicated. It became evident today as the tedious task of selecting the jury was resumed that to his claim of "self defense" and temporary "emotional insanity" he will add the plea that on the night of the crime she administered to him a "love potion."

Aphrodisiacs, was the word used by Judge John F. Seidel, of counsel for Dr. Snook, in designating the particular kind of drug that, it will no doubt be alleged, was taken by the defendant on the night of June 13 last, when, in a frenzy of emotion, he battered the girl to unconsciousness with a hammer and then slit her throat with a pen knife "to relieve her sufferings."

LOVE POTIONS IN CASE
In questioning one of the tentatively accepted women jurors.

Miss Edith Dysinger, a nurse, Seidel bluntly asked her: "Do you know what aphrodisiacs are?" And when the stout-middle-aged nurse replied that she did NOT, the portly attorney for the defense volunteered the explanation that "they are potions which are said to stimulate sexual excitement in human beings."

Emphasis on the "dope" angle was laid by Seidel in interrogating jurors. Would they be prejudiced against Snook if it developed that he and his co-ed paramour "had taken drugs together to determine the human reaction?" he asked. Repeatedly he warned the jurors that drug stimulation and "illicit sexual relations" are going to play an important part in this trial.

LONG LOVE AFFAIR
The illicit love affair of Dr. Snook, the deposed college professor, and Miss Hix had stretched over a period of more than three years, Seidel asserted. Would the fact that this may be a mixed jury of men and women cause any of the jurors to be reluctant about discussing the sordid details of this "affair" in the jury room?

Q.—(By Seidel in examining a talesman who was subsequently peremptorily challenged by the state)—If the evidence should show that on the night of June 13th, the defendant here, a married man, wife and child, and Theora Hix, a girl 24 or 25 years of age, a student in the medical department of Ohio State university, had for three and a half years been very close friends, associated very intimately, and together maintained a "love nest," a meeting place for companionship and study and exchange of ideas had taken an automobile ride and on this ride had taken it with the specific purpose of having intimate relations, and if, after the relations an altercation took place the defendant believed he was in imminent danger of death from a gun that he had previously given her which she carried on many occasions, and that he means of escape was that of taking the life of his assailant, ever thought he was in a state of emergency?

There remains 15 peremptory challenges for the use of the defense, if they so desire.

Mrs. James H. Snook, wife of the defendant, an enigmatic figure in this drama, again remained away from the court room, although she has assured her husband that she is standing by him loyally. She told an interviewer at her home where she is in seclusion that Dr. Snook was "always so kind—so thoughtful—so considerate—so generous." How can she forget that? They found close companionship in fact "completeness" in their married life until three and a half years ago when the co-ed came into her husband's life.

"We were really happy—then," she said. "But things changed. I lost him. But I cannot forget him or the kind things he used to do. No, never have I wanted to divorce him, and I do NOT want to divorce him now."

BODY STOLEN; TRIO IS HELD

Corpse Is Taken From O. S. U. Morgue To Test New Patent Medicine.

COLUMBUS, July 26.—"Three Musketeers" enacted a role here last night, it was learned today, only it was "The Three Musketeers" and what they obtained was not theirs, according to the police blotter.

The three men John E. Huber, 29, Webb Jackson 25, a negro, and Ralph Turner, 21, who are implicated in the robbery and sale of a body, are held in the local jail.

Huber, a credit manager for a downtown store, was eager to expiate with a confession of his own on a human body. So Jackson, of the Hamilton Hall Morgue, and Turner, an embalming student, entered the Hamilton morgue shortly after dark yesterday and obtained the body of a colored woman for Huber.

The body was taken to Huber's home where the two men received a new $10 bill and five one-dollar bills.

But the body was discovered by two detectives before Huber had time to test his wares.

PROSPECTIVE JUROR'S QUIZZING REVEALS RECEIPT OF MENACING POSTCARD BY ATTORNEY SEIDEL

State Satisfied With Jury But Counsel For Former Ohio State University Professor Continue To Use Their Challenges
—Oral Clash Between Barristers Enlivens Friday's Sessions.

(By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.)

COURT ROOM, COLUMBUS, O., July 26.—A threat was sent to him through the mail, Judge John F. Seidel, one of the attorneys defending Dr. James H. Snook, college professor, for the murder of Theora Hix, a co-ed, asserted in court today while examining a prospective juror.

Seidel was interrogating J. B. Collison, a retired druggist. He asked him: "Have you received any telephone calls or threatening letters since you were subpoenaed for jury duty?"

The juror said "no" and then Seidel declared:

"Well, I have. I received a threat in the mail last night."

He started to say more but Judge Henry L. Scarlett stopped him.

"Proceed with the examination," the judge ordered.

This was done.

BELIEVES LETTER WRITER IS "NUT."

Asked by International News Service who had sent the threat to him, Seidel said:

"It was an anonymous postcard warning me I was doomed. No, I am not turning it over to the authorities. I think the writer was a nut."

The court room was packed with young girls and women when this morning's session began. They occupied every seat and stood three deep around the walls.

Mrs. Grace Rodgers, a housewife, was peremptorily challenged by the defense after she had denied she had made the assertion that she would "stick to the end for the maximum punishment."

Snook, attired in a gray suit, white shirt and lavender tie, sat at defense counsel table examining papers through his nose glasses.

The tall, bald-headed defendant, occasionally whispered to his lawyers. He did not even glance in the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hix, the slain girl's parents, who sat inside the railing which separated the attorneys from the spectators.

LAWYERS IN CLASH

Two other talesmen were quickly excused: Jay R. Lawyer, a railroad clerk, was excused because he opposed capital punishment. Russell M. Ober, a civil engineer, had formed a "fixed opinion" concerning the case.

The lawyers on both sides engaged in a bitter debate while Collison was undergoing examination. Seidel asked him whether, in considering the question of Snook's sanity he would accept the testimony of lay or medical witnesses on the question.

"That's not a fair question," interjected Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr.

E. O. Ricketts of defense counsel leaped to his feet and shouted:

"It is!"

Heated argument followed. The judge finally calmed them.

Finally collision was accepted as a juror and took his place in seat number two.

PAINTER CHALLENGED

That filled the jury box once more, but the defense promptly exercised another peremptory challenge, excusing Louis C. Davis, a painter, who was occupying seat number nine.

After a half hour of questioning, Clyde Moody, a farmer, was accepted as a juror and took seat number nine.

The defense then peremptorily challenged juror number six, Mrs. Anna Allman, housewife, and she left the jury box. Examination of talesmen proceeded.

F. E. Houstle, the forty-sixth talesman examined, was quickly excused because he "certainly was" opposed to capital punishment.

EX-STUDENT EXCUSED

Relentlessly the attorneys quizzed the prospective jurors. Every conceivable question was flung at them. The examination of one juror was much like another.

After he was questioned at length, Paul C. Packard, a former university student, was excused because he had made up his mind regarding the guilt or innocence of Snook.

Lawson Bing, an insurance salesman, was accepted as a juror just as court was adjourned until one thirty this afternoon. Bing took seat number six, making 12 seated in the jury box.

Both sides still had peremptory challenges to exercise at the afternoon session. Also, a 13th juror, has yet to be selected.

STATE IS SATISFIED

When the afternoon session began, Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., announced:

"The State will accept the jury as it is now constituted."

But the defense was not satisfied with the jury.

Juror Number 10, Mrs. Albert Brooks was peremptorily challenged by the defense and examination of talesmen was resumed.

It appears as if it will be Monday or Tuesday before a jury is obtained. There will be no court Saturday.

ROTARY CLUB ENJOYS GOLF

All Members Try Skill At Game At Pickaway Country Club Outing.

With the exception of three members, the entire Circleville Rotary club enjoyed the hospitality of the Pickaway country club Thursday during the afternoon and for dinner. Golf for everyone was the program of entertainment in the afternoon, and some of the members who never before had swung a club, showed up the regular players with their drives.

The golf course, some one said, resembled pictures of the World War with detachments of four and eight ascending slowly over the hills or disappearing behind the groves of trees.

At 6:30 o'clock the Rotarians seated themselves on the spacious veranda and enjoyed a most excellent chicken dinner served by Fred Wittich. During the dinner hour, old fashioned music of the square dance vintage was furnished by the Stoutsville Four.

The inter-city Rotarians meeting will be held next Monday at Jackson. A number of the Rotarians at the dinner signified their intention of attending.

MANY AT CLINIC

Women are still interested in canning as there were 28 women and several girls who attended the canning clinic held at the Atlanta school building July 25. The demonstration was given by Miss Catherine Behymeyer, home demonstration agent. The women brought in their problems and exchanged many ideas about canning.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Mason and daughter, Harriett Mason, motored to Oxford, O., Friday where they visited their son, Carl Mason, who has finished school at Miami university.

Miss Edith Dysinger, a nurse, Seidel bluntly asked her: "Do you know what aphrodisiacs are?" And when the stout-middle-aged nurse replied that she did NOT, the portly attorney for the defense volunteered the explanation that "they are potions which are said to stimulate sexual excitement in human beings."

Emphasis on the "dope" angle was laid by Seidel in interrogating jurors. Would they be prejudiced against Snook if it developed that he and his co-ed paramour "had taken drugs together to determine the human reaction?" he asked. Repeatedly he warned the jurors that drug stimulation and "illicit sexual relations" are going to play an important part in this trial.

LONG LOVE AFFAIR

The illicit love affair of Dr. Snook, the deposed college professor, and Miss Hix had stretched over a period of more than three years, Seidel asserted. Would the fact that this may be a mixed jury of men and women cause any of the jurors to be reluctant about discussing the sordid details of this "affair" in the jury room?

Q.—(By Seidel in examining a talesman who was subsequently peremptorily challenged by the state)—If the evidence should show that on the night of June 13th, the defendant here, a married man, wife and child, and Theora Hix, a girl 24 or 25 years of age, a student in the medical department of Ohio State university, had for three and a half years been very close friends, associated very intimately, and together maintained a "love nest," a meeting place for companionship and study and exchange of ideas, had taken an automobile ride and on this ride had taken it with the specific purpose of having intimate relations, and if, after the relations, an altercation took place, the defendant believed he was in imminent danger of death from a gun that he had previously given her, which she carried on many occasions, and that his means of escape was that of taking the life of his assailant, even though he was mistaken afterwards of the imminence of the reality of the danger, would the injection of the assertion of self defense or the fact that a woman was the one who was killed instead of a man, influence your decision one way or the other?

A.—I would try to decide it on the evidence.

SNOOK'S WIFE LOYAL

When court was resumed today every seat in the jury box was filled with the exception of seat number two which stood empty as a result of exercise by the defense of its first peremptory challenge. The state already has used one of its four peremptory challenges. There remains 15 peremptory challenges for the use of the defense, if they so desire.

Mrs. James H. Snook, wife of the defendant, an enigmatic figure in this drama, again remained away from the court room, although she has assured her husband that she is standing by him loyally. She told an interviewer at her home where she is in seclusion that Dr. Snook was "always so kind—so thoughtful—so considerate—so generous." How can she forget that? They found close companionship in fact "completeness," in their married life until three and a half years ago when the co-ed came into her husband's life.

PROSPECTIVE JUROR'S QUIZZING REVEALS RECEIPT OF MENACING POSTCARD BY ATTORNEY SEIDEL

State Satisfied With Jury But Counsel For Former Ohio State University Professor Continue To Use Their Challenges
—Oral Clash Between Barristers Enlivens Friday's Sessions.

(By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent.)

COURT ROOM, COLUMBUS, O., July 26.—A threat was sent to him through the mail, Judge John F. Seidel, one of the attorneys defending Dr. James H. Snook, college professor, for the murder of Theora Hix, a co-ed, asserted in court today while examining a prospective juror.

Seidel was interrogating J. B. Collison, a retired druggist. He asked him: "Have you received any telephone calls or threatening letters since you were subpoenaed for jury duty?"

The juror said "no" and then Seidel declared: "Well, I have. I received a threat in the mail last night."

He started to say more but Judge Henry L. Scarlett stopped him.

"Proceed with the examination," the judge ordered.

This was done.

BELIEVES LETTER WRITER IS "NUT."

Asked by International News Service who had sent the threat to him, Seidel said: "It was an anonymous postcard warning me I was doomed. No, I am not turning it over to the authorities. I think the writer was a nut."

The court room was packed with young girls and women when this morning's session began. They occupied every seat and stood three deep around the walls.

Mrs. Grace Rodgers, a housewife, was peremptorily challenged by the defense after she had denied she had made the assertion that she would "stick to the end for the maximum punishment."

Snook, attired in a gray suit, white soft shirt and lavender tie, sat at defense counsel table examining papers through his nose glasses.

The tall, bald-headed defendant, occasionally whispered to his lawyers. He did not even glance in the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Hix, the slain girl's parents, who sat inside the railing which separated the attorneys from the spectators.

LAWYERS IN CLASH

Two other talesmen were quickly excused. Jay R. Lawyer, a railroad clerk, was excused because he opposed capital punishment. Russell M. Obert, a civil engineer, had formed a "fixed opinion" concerning the case.

The lawyers on both sides engaged in a bitter debate while Collision was undergoing examination. Seidel asked him whether, in considering the question of Snook's sanity he would accept the testimony of lay or medical witnesses on the question.

"That's not a fair question," interjected Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr.

E. O. Rickets of defense counsel leaped to his feet and shouted:

"It is!"

Heated argument followed. The judge finally calmed them.

Finally collision was accepted as a juror and took his place in seat number two.

PAINTER CHALLENGED

That filled the jury box once more, but the defense promptly exercised another peremptory challenge, excusing Louis C. Davis, a painter, who was occupying seat number nine.

After a half hour of questioning, Clyde Moody, a farmer, was accepted as a juror and took seat number nine.

The defense then peremptorily challenged juror number six, Mrs. Anna Allman, housewife, and she left the jury box. Examination of talesmen proceeded.

F. E. Houstle, the forty-sixth talesman examined, was quickly excused because he "certainly was" opposed to capital punishment.

EX-STUDENT EXCUSED

Relentlessly the attorneys quizzed the prospective jurors. Every conceivable question was flung at them. The examination of one juror was much like another.

After he was questioned at length, Paul C. Packard, a former university student, was excused because he had made up his mind regarding the guilt or innocence of Snook.

Lawson Bing, an insurance salesman, was accepted as a juror just as court was adjourned until one thirty this afternoon. Bing took seat number six, making 12 seated in the jury box.

Both sides still had peremptory challenges to exercise at the afternoon session. Also, a 13th juror, has yet to be selected.

STATE IS SATISFIED

When the afternoon session began, Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., announced:

"The State will accept the jury as it is now constituted."

But the defense was not satisfied with the jury.

Juror Number 10, Mrs. Albert Brooks was peremptorily challenged by the defense and examination of talesmen was resumed.

It appears as if it will be Monday or Tuesday before a jury is obtained. There will be no court Saturday.

ROTARY CLUB ENJOYS GOLF

All Members Try Skill At Game At Pickaway Coun- try Club Outing.

With the exception of three members, the entire Circleville Rotary club enjoyed the hospitality of the Pickaway country club Thursday during the afternoon and for dinner. Golf for everyone was the program of entertainment in the afternoon, and some of the members who never before had swung a club, showed up the regular players with their drives.

The golf course, some one said, resembled pictures of the World War with detachments of four and eight ascending slowly over the hills or disappearing behind the groves of trees.

At 6:30 o'clock the Rotarians seated themselves on the spacious veranda and enjoyed a most excellent chicken dinner served by Fred Wittich. During the dinner hour, old fashioned music of the square dance vintage was furnished by the Stoutsville Four.

The inter-city Rotarians meeting will be held next Monday at Jackson. A number of the Rotarians at the dinner signified their intention of attending.

RELAPSE SUFFERED BY VICTOR BERGER

MILWAUKEE, July 26.—(INS)—Victor L. Berger, prominent Socialist leader and newspaper publisher, was in a critical condition here today following a relapse from injuries sustained ten days ago when struck by a surface car. The eminent Socialist spent a restless night, physicians stated, and was unconscious early today. Berger sustained a skull fracture and internal injuries. Physicians said today they were unable to diagnose the exact reason for the patient's sinking spell.

SEYMOUR GETS SLEEP WALLOP IN PARK FIGHT

Kid Wagner Makes Short Work of Opponent In Main Bout At Scippo.

A small gathering ofistic fans, as at Scippo Park Thursday evening, to see a really good fight card. In the eye opener of the evening Kid Iodine of Chillicothe, swapped blows with Kid Logan of Columbus both of these boys mixed it up with the gloves and pleased the crowd. This fight was the first experience for both and they were game. They were substituting for the bout that was to be fought by Lundy Ferguson and Joey Craig.

In the second bout of the evening Batting Fornash of Chillicothe fought Roscoe Wallace of Circleville. The bout went three rounds to a draw and as the fighters were to fight another round in order to break the draw Fornash withdrew from the ring and would not finish the bout. The decision was awarded to Wallace. The first round was slow and both of the boys were hitting hard. Wallace failed in the last round and probably could have decisively whipped Fornash in another round if Fornash had stayed in the ring.

MEXICAN KID WINS

Kid Brown of Chillicothe an Mexican kid of Cincinnati fought in the semi-final bout. It ended in a draw and the boys fought another round to a decision with the Mexican kid winning it. Both of these boys really fought and at the end of the fourth round Brown was nearly exhausted and could not have lasted much longer as the kid was beginning to put dynamite in his punches.

Eddie Kid Wagner in the main go again came to the front with another kayo victory. Shifty Seymour was rapidly put away by Wagner in 60 seconds but got rather nasty about it when he revived. Wagner is a real sportsman and the fans appreciate his clean boxing.

Wagner in the last few months has shown a great improvement over his former form and Thursday evening in the ring he proved that he had a sock in his left hand that counted whenever he landed with it.

Eddie Kid Stout of Washington C. H., challenged Wagner to a bout in the near future.

"Warden of Life"

It was in 1912 that Casimir Funk at that time associated with the College of Physicians and Surgeons New York, said: "There is a force that exercises vital guardianship over the matrix processes by which inert food material is translated into human feeling, thought and action. That force I call vitamin, because it is the warden of life—because it is necessary to life."

Are You Ready

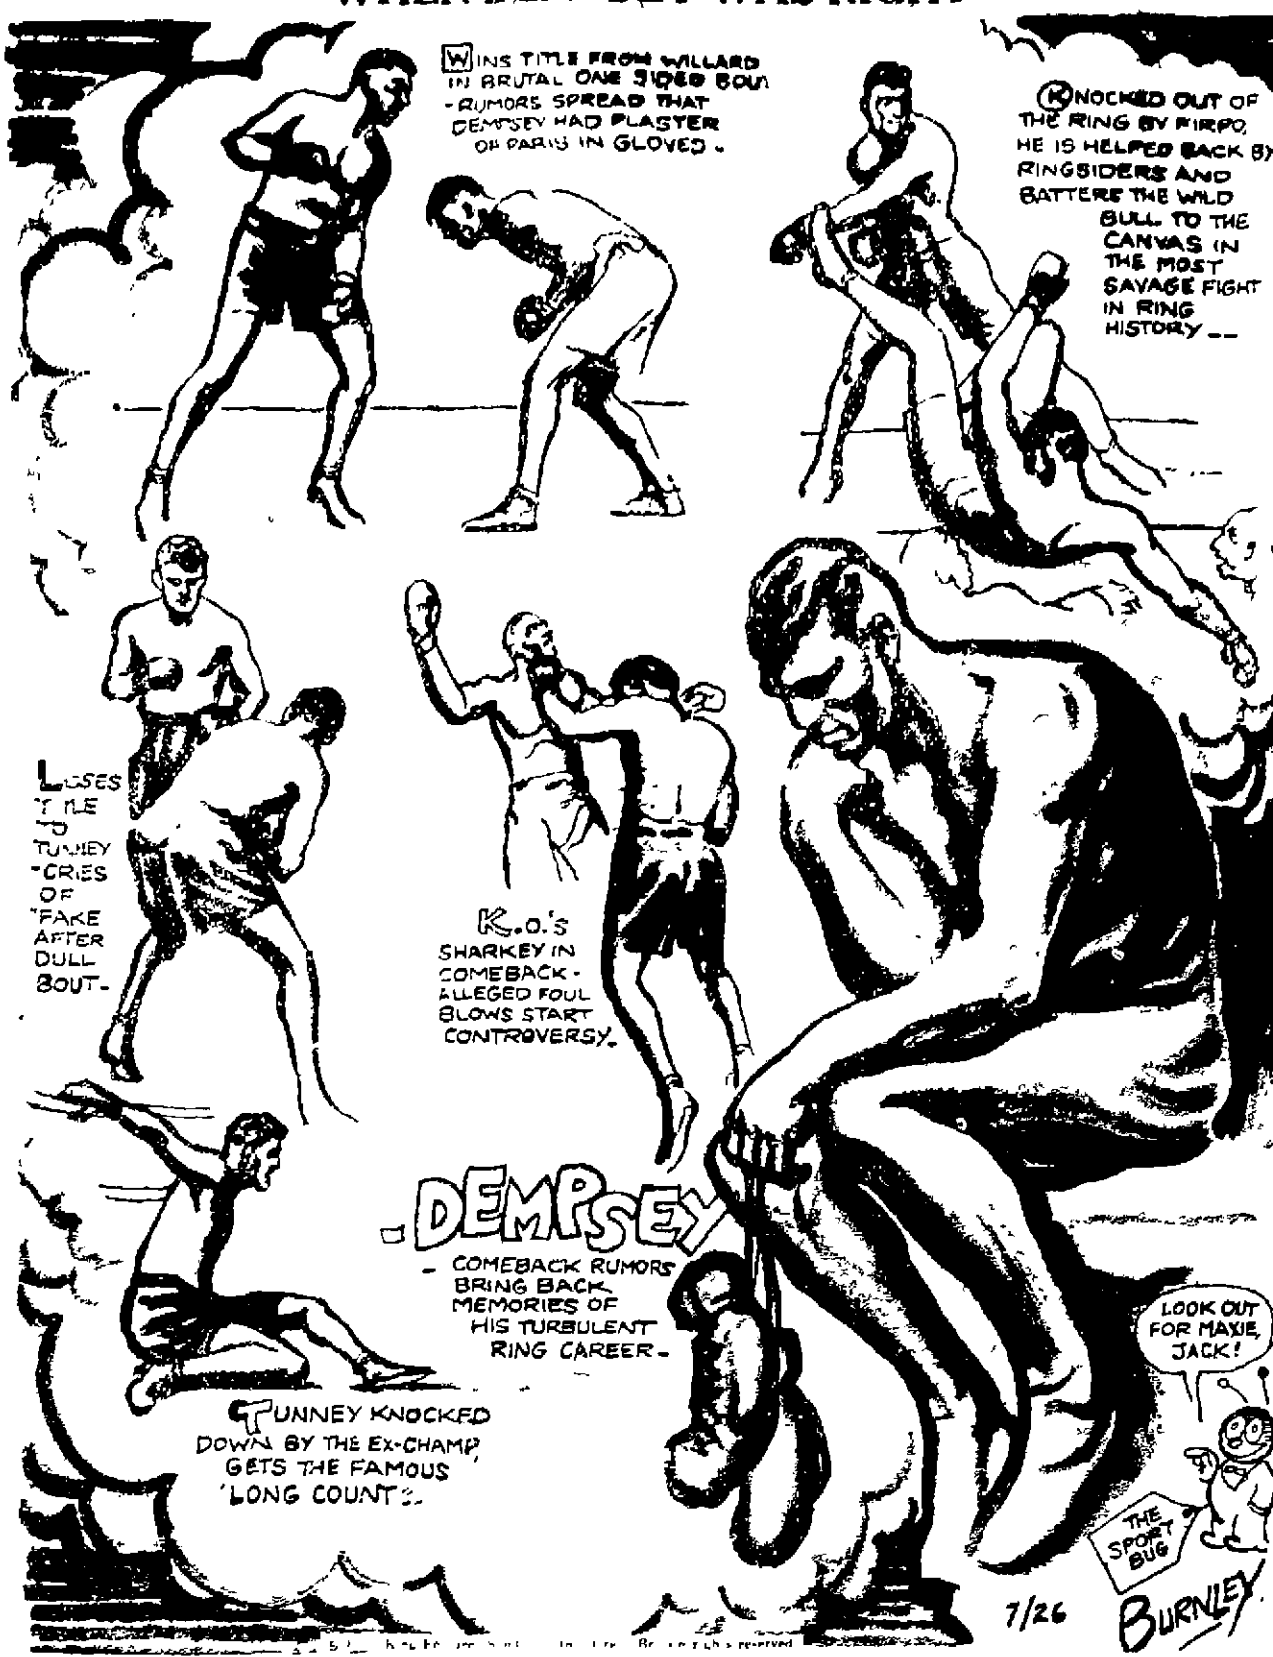

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do: you can give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed, relief is just a matter of moments. Yet what most physicians would tell you have raised your child without use of a single doubtful drug. Castoria is vegetable. So it is safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put to rest. It is always ready for the relief of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea, or teething. For children, Castoria is the only medicine bought.

When a letter traveled from Philadelphia to Berlin 100 years ago in 27 days, it was considered fast. The letters went to Havre by different packets.

GUARDS LOSE TO UTILITIES

Electric Defeat Motor Transports In Only Game Played Thursday.

The Ohio Utilities defeated "the thought to be" unconquerable team Thursday evening when they downed the Motor Transport 2 to 0. This game was very well played and exciting throughout. Don White and Charlie Scott receive the credit for bringing in the electric's runs. The army boys played very hard, and they often had men on third but they couldn't get them home.

The Utilities played a very tight game during the whole period. Davis made two strike-outs. Both infielders and outfielders played exceptionally well. This does not make any change in the league standing but the Motor Transport's percentage score fell slightly.

THE RULE IS!

By GEORGE SARGENT
Golf Professional

The Situation:
In a foursome, A through mistake, plays B's ball in the fairway. Is there any penalty?

The Rule Is:
Should you play your opponent's ball, your side loses the hole unless your opponent plays your ball, in which case all is fair. But the hole must be played out with the balls thus exchanged. In stroke competition you are disqualified if you play two consecutive strokes with the wrong ball. There is no penalty if you play one stroke with a ball not your own and then play your own ball.

Odd English Bird

Pied wagtails are attractive birds, with bold, swinging flight, says Nature Magazine. Their call is something like their relatives, the plovers, as they fly, then alighting beside a stream or stagnant pool to feed, while constantly wagging their long tails. These pied wag tails of England are clad in contrasting black and white; the white wagtails, more common on the continent, are gray and white.

FIELDS OWNS DUNDEE TITLE

Welterweight Champion Loses Crown After Foully Ram-pant Challenger.

DETROIT, July 26 —(INS) For the sake of the welterweight division, it is to be hoped that Jackie Fields, who won the championship last night from Joe Dundee, defends his title at least occasionally, and that when he does it he will go down like a fighting man.

Dundee, who has been known in the fraternity as a "cheese champion," was dropped twice in the second round by the sharpshooting young welter from Chicago and the coast, and then lost the fight and his title on a foul.

"The cheese champion took the easy way out," sneered the cynical brotherhood at the ringside, and perhaps they were right.

Maybe the Baltimore Italian didn't intend to commit a foul. Possibly he didn't know, as he rose groggy and glassy-eyed from the floor, where his random punches were landing. No one knows but Dundee whether the blow was the malicious, deliberate foul of a desperate fighter, or just an accident.

At all events, it was a most wretched way in which to lose a championship, a sorry finish to a fight which drew a larger gate than any other welterweight bout in history.

Gate receipts were estimated at $175,000 and approximately 27,000.

persons came to Promotor Floyd Fitzsimmons' new outdoor arena to witness the debacle. The attendance broke all state records for boxing, and is said to have been twice as large as that of the previous welterweight championship bout at the Polo grounds, two years ago, when Dundee won the title from Pete Latzo.

“GOOD BYE RHEUMATISM!” SAYS CIVIL WAR VETERAN

Rheumatic Pains Dating Back To Civil War Banished By Spinago Says Isaac Grabill.

Sixty-five years of suffering from rheumatism; misery from the time of the Civil War up to a few short months ago; and then, pain banished, rheumatism driven away by three bottles of Spinago. That is the record of this new tonic containing spinach in the case of Isaac Grabill, ninety-year-old Civil War veteran residing between Circleville and Chillicothe on Rural Route No. 6.

ISAAC GRABILL. Is it surprising that Mr. Grabill will be thankful for the rest of his life to Spinago? Is it surprising that countless hundreds of former rheumatic sufferers daily call at The Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St. to gratefully recount the benefits of this super medicine in their cases? No, it is not surprising when such cases as Mr. Grabill's are on record. And his is not the only one. Spinago makes no idle promises; it goes to work and quickly, quietly and efficiently attacks the causes of rheumatism at the root, driving from the body all rheumatic pain and torture. Thousands of residents in this vicinity have learned the powers of Spinago and are thankful for their regained health and well-being.

Mr. Grabill speaks as follows: "Spinago has driven away pain and suffering from rheumatism which has been with me since the close of the Civil War. Medicine after medicine I tried but no success. Finally I started on the Spinago treatment with miraculous results. Gone are all rheumatic pains, gone are my indiges-

Houdon's Washington

Jean Antoine Houdon's famous bust of George Washington was purchased in London for $250,000 by an American, the negotiation having been made by J. I. McGurck, American art expert. Although the purchaser's name was not made public, it is rumored to be either Percy A. Rockefeller or John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

WOMAN KILLS SELF AND 3 DAUGHTERS

NEW BRITAIN, CONN., July 26 (INS)—Mrs. Esther Hallin, 31, and three daughters, Carol, two, Ruth, four and Ellen, six, were found dead in a bed room in their home at 55 Brooklawn-st, by police.

Beside the bed where the four bodies lay was a note written in Swedish by Mrs. Hallin which stated the woman's intent of killing her children and herself by turning on the gas.

Constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, stomach, bowel and liver ailments, nervousness and lack of energy as well as rheumatism simply cannot withstand the powerful action of this medicine which contains as its most important ingredient that most valuable of foods, Spinach.

Spinago is sold and guaranteed by The Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St., and by all other good druggists in this vicinity. —Adv.

making my home with her for a while. Yes, there's nothing like all over the country with him, I thought. He has so much to your own flesh and blood. I always saw, a girl has no friend like her mother. I'll just go right in and make myself at home. Maybe I'll do a little cleaning up while the old man's here, and get rid of some of the old furniture I've got in there. "I brought a few little things of my own in the trunk, it'll make it more homelike. I'm a creature here for having a place homelike. . . . If you could just send down for my trunk, here's the check and put it on Crystal's bill. . . . thank you. . . . I'm sure you'll find me a contented tenant, thanks ever so much!"

Adelina felt happier than she had for months when she got into a bungalow apron and a pair of crocheted slippers, and began to "nick up" a bit in Crystal's cluttered apartment.

"She'll be glad to see Mama," she thought contentedly. "And there was a real nice-looking man in the office. He looked like a widower to me. I'm sure he'd be one to appreciate a real woman. . . . Crystal was right, there are better chances in the city. . . . I'll just do up-stairs, second-rate realtor—realtor!"—just how much she disapproved was pointed out by the man kind to live in arick to like like San Jose. Well he'll see. There's as good fish in the sea as was ever caught. . . . I'll have to get my hair touched up a bit. . . . I

I thought she has no intentions! Sometimes she went after work, to the little flat near the park, where Flora and her new family lived. A shabby, none too clean, little place littered with battered, wigless dolls, and blocks, and tattered picture books. With children's socks and rompers just out of the wash-bub, and just due for the wash-bub. With oil paints and brushes, with rickety easels and powdered charcoal, and half-finished drawings.

It was good to feel Flora's warm arms around her. "Daphne, if you are going to sport to crawl up to this hell-hole, see us!—I don't perfectly frighten you. . . . Krunk Junior's shoes off that stool and sit down. No. Alice, sweetest, you can't kiss Daffy till you wash your dirty face—wash her face. Gifter, there's a good girl! Now tell me what you fellows are saying about me? Of course, I'm save to dine. . . . I've got macaroni, Spanish, and Axel will make one of his famous salads, and there's some beer—"

But though Flora made her home most welcome, and the three ground-floor shabby children greeted her with shrieks of joy, Daphne always went home with a lump in her throat, and a sense of depression that lasted for days. Just the way the "all, stoop-shoulder, neck-ache" touched Flora, the quick understanding glances that flashed between Old Mr. Greeley chuckled when he heard what Ralph had done. "Worse 'n' jail," he said.

The chuckling brought on a coughing fit that worried Daphne, but not the old man. "It was worth it," he wheezed between paroxysms. "Funniest thing I ever heard!"

The girls in the office thought it was funny, too. "Did you ever?" Mrs. Hebble, the boldest one, sighed. "Well, it just goes to show, honey, that you can't trust a man. I'm sure that he was crazy about you. Once the last time he came in I told him Miss Yardley. I wonder who'll get Miss Haines' job, when she and Mr. McKeitt get married?"—and here you are, high and dry.

"Yes, yes," said the high and dry—and not even the high and dry of being free again could make up the sting of that. It was not that she still wanted Ralph. She wondered if she had ever really loved him, and wasn't it a relief to find out that she hadn't?

—And now Miss Yardley is so mending basket, and what did they matter? They had loved, and love bright enough to gild and glorify even the dreary job of earning a living.

"I'm one of the unlucky ones," she decided. "I'll go to work forever and ever. I've got a good position now. I can have nice clothes—like Miss Yardley, and go to plays and symphonies with the girls. After a while I'll save enough to buy a nice apartment, and get a cat, and make a life all the rest of the old maid's."

"Allan—come back to me!" she cried across the miles.

"I'm coming—wait for me!" she could hear him answer.

But that was no answer. She had forgotten her by this time, men were good at forgetting. She tried to force his image out of her mind. . . . blue eyed, snook-headed Allan with the old, old look back of his eyes, and the friendly freckles over his nose.

She lifted up all her strength again to stare at him. "Look all the time you put in mooning over that Ralph McKeitt!" And gave her a letter from Allan. "I found it in her hand to give Crystal," she said. "Crystal would be happy with Barney when he can't have all the things she wants, and has been a little better and that will be good if he's out of the pen and all the rest."

"And when the time comes,"

BUYING AND FLYING

A writer in a current magazine, who seems to know a lot about the development of aviation in this country, says "With the cost of buying and ying a plane what it is, one wonders where in this land of material blessedness our plane owners come from. Where, for example, are the men who are to buy the 10,000 planes promised by the industry for 1929?"

How exactly the airplane seems to be following the course marked out by the automobile! It comes faster because it got a running, take-off with all the discoveries and inventions the automobile had to feel for and work out painstakingly. But about the same doubts and objections and predictions go with aviation progress that stuck to motoring.

When the first automobiles appeared, the skeptics' chorus joined in the refrain: "Who is going to pay $2,000 or more for one of those things? It's a rich man's plaything. And where are these rich men enough to warrant the growth of such an industry?"

But there were enough rich men to encourage and bring the industry into existence and there were ways found to make the new device available for those who were not rich. The cost of "buying and flying" will not handicap the aircraft industry. It has progressed far enough already to prompt that prediction.

"RED MENACE" REPUDIATED

President Hoover deserves to be applauded for the sane stand he has taken with reference to the war against "bolshhevism," which certain light-headed patrioters recently tried to launch under the auspices of Republican officialdom. The president says his name was used without authorization and declares that he dislikes and repudiates the entire enterprise.

This is a great relief. The "red" bugaboo never was anything but an empty scarecrow designed to frighten timid souls and make money for certain professional propagandists. Not even the ardent drive of a A. Mitchell Palmer could make the majority of thoughtful Americans believe that this country was facing overthrow at the hands of scheming radicals.

Mr. Hoover's prompt and conclusive repudiation of all such insensate attempts to stir up fear and apprehension among American citizens will be generally regarded as a wholesome tonic. This nation is by no means heading toward regime like that of Soviet Russia. And the best way to maintain our conservative poise and balance is to put the skids under every fool who shouts, "Wolf!"

IMPROVED RELATIONS

When a giant German airship recently drifted almost helpless over France, the French government and citizens spared no effort to direct its course and bring it safely to earth. At once there was a notable improvement in Franco-German relations.

Last week a British aircraft carrier discovered and rescued a party of Spanish aviators adrift in the Atlantic. French, Italian and Portuguese vessels also participated in the search. One Sunday an immense procession in Madrid visited the embassies of all these countries in a popular demonstration of gratitude. In Buenos Aires the Spanish-speaking descendants of Spaniards feted the crew of a British warship, who could not imagine what it was all about.

Thus kindness bespeaks affection. Thus even the disasters of aviation are helping the realization of the brotherhood of man, and having their favorable repercussion on international relations.

Founded New Type of Dog

The name Doberman or Doberman Pinscher as applied to a breed of dog is said to be derived from the name of a German dog catcher of Apolda, who founded the breed by crossing dogs of the Pinscher and shepherd types. In Germany this type of dog has been used extensively as a watchdog and police dog.

CHAPTER LXVII.

WHILE he went below to settle with the manager, she packed a bag, and dressed. The overdue rent took more than half of his bank balance at the bank.

"We'll have to find a cheaper place soon," he thought gloomily on his way upstairs. "We won't be able to live here on that miserable salary. Unless I can borrow a little and get in on something good..."

"You're going to marry a damn poor man," he told Crystal, moodily a few minutes later, looking at her gold fitted dressing case, and the blue fox fur dangling carelessly over her arm.

"Darling!" she murmured. "Do you suppose I care? We'll live in a cottage, and I'll cook you hamburger steak and carrots every night for dinner!"

"It won't be quite that bad," he said, laughing. He was thinking of a forty dollar flat out near the Golf Links...anything would be heaven with an angel like Crystal. "Well, I hoped it wouldn't—for your sake!" She laughed back. She was thinking of a couple of rooms in one of the hotels down town, nothing de luxe, until he got on his feet, of course.

So they went down the stairs, their arms entwined...each wrapped in thought.

In the mailbox she saw the white of a letter through the black ironwork grill.

"Now that I'm almost your husband I'll have to see all your mail!"

She smiled and tucked it into her purse. "Indeed you will, darling—it's only a bill!"

It was from Gideon Cockerburr, she had had time to see that. Now what did he want? Maybe his wife had gone away again...he never wrote about trivial things...Maybe she had better read it before she got in too deep with Ralph...no use in losing your head, and bungling things, when with a little management you could take care of everything...

"Dear, while you're putting the bags in the car I'm going to run back upstairs for just one minute. I've forgotten my..."

But she never finished the sentence. As her glance shifted uneasily about, searching for the convincing lie, her eyes fell on an alarmingly familiar figure toiling up the hill from the street car stop. Her mother! Adelina, fatter and blower than ever, a too small green hat atop her mop of brassy hair...Adelina riding in the street cars, lugging a suitcase and a paper hatbag...Adelina who called a taxi to ride two hundred yards unless she was flat, dead broke...

In a moment the stout, puffing figure, for the moment engrossed with slipping bundles and fallen arches, would raise her head and see them.

"What did you forget, dear?" "Nothing!" Crystal cried breathlessly. "Nothing! Oh, do hurry Ralph, I'm so darned nervous!"

She scrambled into the car. She clutched her purse with Cockerburr's letter within it, more tightly in her hot hands. "Whew! What a close call!"

And the unconscious, triumphant and not quite happy bridegroom to be, drove on. He was hoping she wouldn't blame him too much for holding back some of the facts about his private affairs. He was a little nervous about Daphne too...left holding the sack. It wasn't quite the thing to do...but hell! Nobody's perfect!

...but hell! Nobody's perfect he decided. He put her into high and the car swooped smoothly, noisily down the hill.

"But I'm her mother!" Adelina was telling the manager. "Miss Garroty might not of told you I was comin', because she wasn't just expectin' me. I'm thinking of making my home with her for a while. Yes, there's nothing like your own flesh and blood. I always say, a girl has no friend like her mother. I'll just go right in and make myself at home. Maybe I'll do a little cleaning up while she's gone and get rid of some of the old pictures she's got in there.

"I brought a few little things of my own in the trunk, it'll make it more homelike. I'm a great hand for having a place homelike. . . . If you could just send down for my trunk, here's the check and put it on Crystal's bill. . . . thank you. . . . I'm sure you'll find me a real quiet tenant, thanks ever so much!"

Adelina felt happier than she had for months when she got into a bungalow apron and a pair of crocheted slippers, and began to "pick up" a bit in Crystal's cluttered apartment.

"She'll be glad to see Mama," she thought contentedly. "And that was a real nice lookin' man in the manager's office. He looked like a widower to me. You can see he'd be one to appreciate a real woman. . . . Crystal was right, there are better chances in the city. . . . I'll show that uppity, second-rate realtor—realtor! Bah!—just how much he disappointed me. . . . as if I'm the kind to live in a hick town like San Jose. Well, he'll see. There's as good fish in the sea as ever caught. . . . I'll have to get my hair touched up a bit. . . . I wonder where Crystal has her charge accounts?"

And Crystal sped on toward her honeymoon, with her "rich" husband by her side.

Old Mr. Greely chuckled when he heard what Ralph had done. "Worse n' jail," he said.

The chuckling brought on a coughing fit that worried Daphne, but not the old man. "It was worth it," he wheezed between paroxysms. "Funniest thing I ever heard!"

The girls in the office thought it was funny, too. "Did you ever?" Mrs. Hobbs, the boldest one, sighed. "Well, it just goes to show, honey, that you can't trust a man. I sure thought he was crazy about you. Only the last time he came in I said to Miss Yardley, 'I wonder who'll get Miss Haines' job, when she and McKevitt get married?'—and here you are, high and dry!"

Yes, there she was—high and dry—and not even the blessed relief of being free again could quite ease the sting of that. It wasn't that she still wanted Ralph. She wondered if she had ever really loved him. . . . wasn't it just being in love with love instead?

Or had he killed her love, so slowly, so quietly, in such trivial, little ways, that she didn't even know when it died? Finding his guilt didn't do it. . . . it was gone long before that. . . . She even found it in her heart to pity Crystal. . . . "Crystal won't ever be happy with Ralph when she can't have all the things she wants, and has been used to. . . . what if he do if he finds out about that artist, and all those men?"

"And suppose her mother comes back, and wants to live with them. . . . It was foolish worrying about them, but she couldn't get it off her mind.

She was lonely, too. Conscious of the pitying glances Miss Viola threw after her, and the whisperings of Mrs. Spellman, and Mrs. Halliday.

"As I told Spellman, if I told him once I told him fifty times. 'A working girl is a fool if she thinks a society man is going to marry her,' I said. I could see from the first."

"Sure. Those kind don't respect a girl without a chapman and all. Believe me, when she went riding all over the country with him, I thought 'He has fine intentions! I thought—'

Sometimes she went, after work, to the little flat near the park where Flora and her new family lived. A shabby, none too clean little place littered with battered, wigless dolls, and blocks, and tattered picture books. With children's little socks and rompers just out of the wastub, and just due for the wastub. With oil paints and brushes, with rickety easels and powdered charcoal, and half finished drawings.

It was good to feel Flora's warm arms around her. "Daphne, if you aren't the sport to crawl up to this hell-hole to see us!—I can't it perfectly frightful? Knock Junior's shoes off that chair and sit down. No, Alice, sweetheart, you can't kiss Daddy till you wash your dirty face—wash her face. Sister, there's a good girl! Now tell me what the cats are saying about me. Of course v all stay to dinner? I've got macaroni, Spanish, and Axel will make one of his famous salads, and there's some beer."

But though Flora made her more than welcome, and the three round-eyed, chubby, children greeted her with shrieks of joy, Daphne always went home with a lump in her throat, and a sense of depression that lasted for days.

Just the way the tall, stoop-shouldered Axel touched Flora, the quick understanding glances that flashed between them, made her ache with loneliness. They had each other. . . . the shabby flat, the noisy children, the heaped mending basket, the what did they matter? They had love, love bright enough to gild and glorify even the dreary job of everyday living.

"I'm one of the unlucky ones," she decided. "I'll go on working forever and ever. I've got a good position now. I can have nice clothes like Miss Yardley, and go to plays and symphonies with other girls. After a while I'll save enough to have my own apartment, and raise a cat, and a parrot, like all the rest of the old maids."

"Allan—come back to me!" she cried across the miles.

"I'm coming—wait for me!" she could almost hear him answer. But that was nonsense, of course. He'd have forgotten her by this time, men were good at forgetting. She tried to force his image out of her mind. . . . blue eyed, shock-headed Allan with the old, tired look back of his eyes, and the little-boy freckles over his nose. . . .

She battled with all her strength against thinking about him. "Look all the time you put in mooning over that Ralph McKevitt! And what good did that ever do you, Foolish? Suppose Allan Winters did like you once? Couldn't he get over it?" Not for worlds would she have asked old Mr. Greely for news, though she knew intuitively that he was in touch with Allan.

"I hear Mr. Winters is going to be in charge at McKevitt's pretty soon," Barney, the office boy, volunteered. "Gee, it'll be tough on McKevitt to have to take orders from him, won't it? But gee, he's getting off easy at that. Every-body on the street is talking. . . . he sure did Mr. Winters an awful turn. If I was him I wouldn't have the face to stick it out. Maybe he'll beat it when Mr. Winters gets back—I heard he most likely will—What did you hear, Miss Haines?"

"I didn't hear anything," Daphne said truthfully, though Barney didn't believe her. Fair chance of the Boss' secretary not knowing anything about it! But how was he to know that old Mr. Greely was again playing Doh?

THEATERS

CLIFTONA DOUBLE BILL

Two feature pictures will be on the screen at the Cliftona theater Friday and Saturday. One will be "The Flying Fool," with William Boyd and other will be "Rose of the Golden West," starring Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland.

Bill Boyd and Marie Prevost hit the sky in "The Flying Fool," a comedy drama if a high-flier with planes and janes. Bill's a self-styled tough egg who "finds 'em, fools 'em, and forgets 'em." Marie is one he almost didn't find, didn't fool, and couldn't forget. So —high drama, roaring planes, then—well, see it! And the way Marie croons "If I Had My Way!" It's no down-payment voice, either. It's all hers.

"A FLYIN' COWBOY"

Hoot Gibson and Olive Hasbrouck are starred at the Grand theater Friday in "A Flyin' Cowboy" with the galloping ace in the most spectacular riding picture ever filmed. Watch him chase the most notorious bandits that ever infested the west. The fourth chapter of "The Final Reckoning," and a talking comedy also will be shown.

SUMMER PLAY SCHOOL IDEAL FOR CHILDREN

There the Youngsters, After Year of Study, Can Rebuild Health and Receive Training in Right Living and Management of Their Bodies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THE annual exodus of boys and girls from the city to the various Summer camps in the country and at the seashore is well under way. These children will spend long, happy days in sunshine, and fresh air, and long nights sleeping out under the stars in the invigorating pine woods, or near some wooded shore. They will build anew in health for the days to come.

And it is good news, indeed, to hear of the Summer play schools to be opened in New York City, and in other cities, for the Summer months. In New York alone there are twenty-one of them. Already 2,000 children are enrolled, and this means 2,000 children kept off the city streets. They are in school work made attractive by experienced teachers, using the most modern and approved methods.

In the Winter time the parents of these children will meet in study groups along the line of child training. Can anything be more beneficial and practical?

In our future educational programmes for public good we must consider the matter of personal hygiene. We must begin with the very young child to build up sound bodies and clear brains.

Diet is of great importance for sound health. No one doubts the value of fresh air and cleanliness as factors in skin hygiene, the importance of building up resistance to respiratory infections, the value of exercise and play, the benefits of sleep and rest, and the effects of the right stimulus on the mental state. All of these are important matters which should govern the first few years of a child's life.

In the matter of diet, nothing is better in promoting good health in a child than plenty of milk, fruits and fresh vegetables. New York City provides, in the hot Summer months, milk stations where needy children may have free milk. A child should have milk, or crackers and milk, in the middle of the morning and of the afternoon, with a short rest following.

The school child spends much of his waking day under strict school rules of study that for him are difficult tasks. He must undertake home work in his studies. In consequence, he is deprived of the freedom in play and the fresh air that he enjoyed in his pre-school days.

Undernourished and underweight children need more rest than they do strenuous exercise. Over-fatigue must be guarded against. Such children ought to have plenty of sleep. The child should be made to lie down on a bed or cot, in the fresh air if possible, and where it is quiet. This has should be taken daily.

The chronic fatigue of a school child may be due to lack of sleep or to faulty food. This over-fatigue causes toxic poisons in the system which can be overcome only by complete relaxation.

Our young citizens must be trained to healthy living and must know how to manage their bodies well. In the Fall, the boy or girl will be found in health, with a happy Summer of play and work behind, and able to meet the work of the new school year and the rigors of the Winter months.

"FRIENDS LAUGHED WHEN I STARTED TO TAKE KONJOLA"

"But in a Few Weeks the Laugh Was On Them," Says Happy Lady Freed of Rheumatism.

MRS. MANNING FASSETT.

"I had been troubled with rheumatism all over my body, and my legs, arms and feet were badly swollen," said Mrs. Manning Fassett, Route No. 1, Ashtabula, Ohio. "I would not be able to walk after rising in the morning. At times the pains were almost unbearable, and I could hardly stand it."

"My friends laughed when I started to take Konjola, but in a few weeks the laugh was on them. After the sixth bottle I was entirely rid of the terrible rheumatism that had distressed me for years. The friends who ridiculed Konjola now praise it, after seeing what it has done for me."

SUMMER PLAY SCHOOL IDEAL FOR CHILDREN

There the Youngsters, After Year of Study, Can Rebuild Health and Receive Training in Right Living and Management of Their Bodies.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THE annual exodus of boys and girls from the city to the various summer camps in the country and at the seashore is well under way. These children will spend long, happy days in sunshine and fresh air, and long nights sleeping out under the stars in the invigorating pine woods, or near some wooded shore. They will build anew in health for the days to come.

And it is good news, indeed, to hear of the Summer play schools to be opened in New York City, and in other cities, for the Summer months. In New York alone there are twenty-one of them. Already 2,000 children are enrolled, and this means 2,000 children kept off the city streets. They are in school work made attractive by experienced teachers, using the most modern and approved methods.

In the Winter time the parents of these children will meet in study groups along the line of child training. Can anything be more beneficial and practical?

In our future educational programmes for public good we must consider the matter of personal hygiene. We must begin with the very young child to build up sound bodies and clear brains.

Diet is of great importance for sound health. No one doubts the value of fresh air and cleanliness as factors in skin hygiene, the importance of building up resistance to respiratory infections, the value of exercise and play, the benefits of sleep and rest and the effects of the right stimulus on the mental state. All of these are important matters which should govern the first few years of a child's life.

In the matter of diet, nothing is better in promoting good health in a child than plenty of milk, fruits and fresh vegetables. New York City provides, in the hot Summer months, milk stations where needy children may have free milk. A child should have milk, or crackers and milk, in the middle of the morning and of the afternoon, with a short rest following.

The school child spends much of his waking day under strict school rules of study that for him are difficult tasks. He must undertake home work in his studies. In consequence, he is deprived of the freedom in play and the fresh air that he enjoyed in his pre-school days. Undernourished and underweight children need more rest than they do strenuous exercise. Over-fatigue must be guarded against. Such children ought to have plenty of sleep. The child should be made to lie down on a bed or cot, in the fresh air if possible, and where it is quiet. This nap should be taken daily.

The chronic fatigue of a school child may be due to lack of sleep or faulty food. This over-fatigue causes toxic poisons in the system which can be overcome only by complete relaxation.

Our young citizens must be trained to healthy living and must know how to manage their bodies well. In the Fall, the boy or girl will be sound in health, with a happy Summer of play and work behind, and able to meet the work of the new school year and the rigors of the Winter months.
